

A unique classical duo featuring the pianist Maximilian Bratt and the cellist Vida Vujic. Two young artists driven by the ardency of the musical expression. They have met at the University of Music and Performing Arts Vienna playing string quartet and decided to extend their co-operation in the duo formation as well. Listening to this duo makes you remember that the classical music roots lie in the popular music and the BraVu-ra's interpretations of e.g. the Spanish music give rise to an irresistible urge to dance and subsequently a feeling of an active participation in the performance. The duo's additional repertoire flexibility is due to Maximilian's ability to perform on both piano and violin that result in a uniqueness of providing programmes for cello and piano as well as violin and cello, in the same concert if required. A youthful and attractive duo, trying to reach younger and newer audiences but at the same time keeping the true music lovers in mind by their sincere devotion to the ideals of the universal language of music.
